Job Announcement
Local Policy Director
February 2008

The California Center for Public Health Advocacy (CCPHA) seeks to hire a Local Policy Director.

The Local Policy Director will design and direct a new project to support city leaders throughout California in establishing local policies that promote healthy eating and physical activity. Job responsibilities include coordinating with project partners, developing tools and materials for city officials, providing training and assistance to elected officials and supervising project staff.

Necessary qualifications for the position include:

- A minimum of ten years of project management or community organizing experience
- Knowledge of city government
- Experience advocating for state or local policy change
- Excellent writing skills, including the ability to write for varied audiences
- Training experience and strong public speaking skills
- Experience with ethnically diverse California communities
- Ability to travel throughout California
- Supervisory experience

Familiarity with policies to promote healthy eating and physical activity, bilingual skills, flexibility, creativity and a sense of humor are pluses.

CCPHA is a non-profit, non-partisan organization that raises awareness about public health issues and mobilizes communities to promote the establishment of effective health policies. CCPHA has led successful and groundbreaking efforts to curb the dual epidemics of obesity and diabetes by advocating for state and local policy reforms to promote healthy eating and physical activity. CCPHA regards the resolution of these epidemics to be a social justice issue and seeks a Local Policy Director with a similar perspective.

Salary will be commensurate with experience. CCPHA provides strong employee and dependent medical, dental, vision benefits and 403(b) benefits. The desired location for this position is Davis; however, location may be negotiable.

To apply, send a cover letter describing relevant experience and desired salary, a resume and a writing sample by March 14, 2008 to:
